From Agreements to Innovation: Global Pathways in Entrepreneurship

Bilbao, 22 June 2026

BAT Tower Auditorium

Gran Vía 1. 6th floor

Recent global disruptions have reshaped debates on how governments respond to crises and interact with the private sector, particularly through public–private collaboration. These pressures are compounded by demographic change, climate challenges, and the rapid rise of AI and automation, all of which demand timely and innovative responses. In this context, entrepreneurship—across business, social, and public spheres—has become a key mechanism for addressing complex problems.

Governments play a decisive role in enabling such innovation, especially through taxation policies that can foster both economic growth and social impact. However, these measures are difficult to implement in environments marked by fiscal limitations and political division. At the same time, the role played by regional and local authorities, particularly in decentralized systems, is becoming increasingly important.

The symposium will explore how entrepreneurship is transforming business–government relations, with a focus on Bizkaia in the Basque Country and its use of public policies to promote entrepreneurial activity. Its findings, to be published by the Center for Basque Studies at UNR, aim to shed light on the evolving relationship between governments and society in the contemporary world.

A Joint Symposium of the University of Nevada, Reno (UNR) College of Business and Ozmen Center for Entrepreneurship, the UNR Center for Basque Studies, and the Government of Bizkaia.
